

Lothel (Lo) Jefferson is our newest PBC member. She was born in Norfolk and moved to Chesapeake during her formative years before her parents moved to the District of Columbia. She graduated from Crestwood High School and attended Howard University where she graduated with a degree in English with minors in Education and Speech. Lo then taught high school in the District before retiring in 2003.

She was introduced to bridge by another teacher around 1998 and played for about two years until her friend moved away. Although she wasn't playing bridge, she continued to read about the game and study online until 2019. After moving to Newport News, she started taking lessons from Jim Davis after learning about his lessons from the Denbigh Community Center.

Her love for the game stems from feeling it is ever changing, a mental challenge and requires frequent play to sharpen the skills necessary to become a good player.

Lo is married to Justin Jefferson. She has daughter, Robin, and a son, Wesley. This blended family also has two granddaughters and one grandson.

Lo has a culinary passion for experimenting with new recipes (sure Justin loves that). She is an animal lover and although she no longer has pets, she loves to watch all kinds of animal programs on TV. She also has many bird feeders and houses that provide entertainment and an opportunity to observe nature.

May many master points and enjoyment come your way at the PBC.
